1. A mixed Soviet-Czech military commission met at Prague under the chairmanship of General Govorov (fnu)¹ between 2 and 19 March 1953 to discuss the reorganization of the Czechoslovak Army.
2. An independent command is to be organized for the motorized-mechanized field army which is to be formed. This motorized-mechanized army will include the following units:
 - a. The I Motorized-Mechanized Army Corps, now fully organized, which will be stationed in Bohemia.
 - b. The II Motorized-Mechanized Army Corps, now being organized, which will be transferred to Moravia.
 - c. The III Motorized-Mechanized Army Corps, the organizing of which will begin in July 1953. This corps will be stationed in Slovakia.
3. A special Soviet military mission, independent of the general Soviet military mission², will be attached to the motorized-mechanized army.
4. Arrangements for this reorganization of the Czechoslovak Army were agreed to by Soviet Marshal Nikolay Aleksandrovich Bulganin, who attended the last sessions of the commission with General Kobulov (fnu).³

1. Comment: Not to be confused with Marshal of the Soviet Union Leonid Aleksandrovich Govorov.
Comment: A General I.P. Govorov was reported as the commanding general of the 34th Guards Division (sic) in Hungary in July 1946.
